Aims & Scope:

The increasing applications of artificial intelligence have attracted the interest for both researchers and developers from academic fields and industries worldwide. Artificial intelligence (AI) consists of various subjects such as machine learning, pattern recognition, intelligent systems, knowledge management systems and so forth. Recently, Internet of things has evolved that connects various objects or devices equipped with sensing system that provides opportunities to the data scientist to analyze the data for various smart intelligent systems. Advances in machine learning evolved a new area of research such as deep learning which opens various novel methods to analyze the data. AI has become a revolution and current interest for researchers and practitioners all over the world due to recent breakthroughs in AI with big data and deep learning methodologies. It is a motivation for next generation of research and side-by-side also brought new challenges to the community.
